421 bridge work moves on...

Andy White, of Paoli, watches traffic stream by from the hole where he was replacing the gas pipeline in the 800 block of East Second Street Monday as part of the Project 421 Gateway bridge approach construction site. White and co-workers Kevin Jester and Joshua Smith (seen gathering supplies in truck) said heavy traffic going to and from the bridge makes for a tense work day. Construction on the multi-million dollar Project 421 Gateway to Madison began in April 2019 to reconstruct a new U.S. 421 approach to the Milton-Madison Bridge over the Ohio River.

The project, which the state has now earmarked for up to $15 million in funding, has included demolition of structures and reconfiguration of streets as well as work on water mains, gas lines and sidewalks. All work is projected to be complete by late summer 2020, the state transportation department has said. Throughout the project's phases, drivers were told to expect lane closures and reduced speed limits as crews worked. That has been the case. Crews began last week to work on the north side of Second Street west of Harrison. This week, they continue the work on gas pipelines that have to be finished before more work on the street and sidewalk itself can begin.

2020 climate meet set for Evansville

Evansville Courier & Press

EVANSVILLE — Elected officials and community leaders from across Indiana will be in Evansville this year for the Climate Leadership Summit, an annual gathering about climate change.

This will be the fifth year for the daylong series of workshops and speakers, and the second time it has been outside Indianapolis where Earth Charter Indiana, the organizer, is based.

The summit provides local officials and key community partners a chance to talk about how to prepare for climate change and implement strategies to mitigate its effects. The event is free and completely funded by sponsors, Assistant Director Shannon Anderson said. This year's workshops are still being planned.

"We really try to give city, mayors and county officials resources they can use in their daily lives to deal with climate issues," Anderson said.

An ongoing series of studies by the Purdue Climate Change Research Center at Purdue University has been outlining how climate change is already affecting Indiana and how it will impact the state's infrastructure, economy, agriculture, environment and climate.

Evansville Mayor Lloyd Winnecke said he is excited for the city to host the conference as community leaders around the state seek to understand the growing importance of learning more about changing climate.

Earth Charter Indiana said the date for the Climate Leadership Summit is yet to be determined but the gathering will take place at the end of summer.

Judge says IDEM broke its rules in issuing plant permit

Indiana

EVANSVILLE — Indiana's environmental agency broke its own public comment rules when it issued an air pollution permit for a planned $2.5 billion coal-to-diesel plant, an administrative law judge ruled in siding with the plant's opponents. Environmental Law Judge Catherine Gibbs agreed with the opponents' appeal that the Indiana Department of Environmental Management, or IDEM, did not respond to a public records request before the 30-day public comment period ended for Riverview Energy's proposed project, the Evansville Courier and Press reported. Gibbs is a judge with the Office of Environmental Adjudication, which hears appeals involving IDEM decisions. Charles McPhedran, an attorney for Earthjustice who prepared the appeal on behalf of Southwestern Indiana Citizens for Quality of Life and Valley Watch, said the judge has not issued an order yet that would require IDEM to reopen public comments on the permit. The order might not come until after the appeal hearing on June 29. Riverview Energy's planned project in the Spencer County community of Dale would convert coal into diesel fuel and Naphtha. It is expected to release about 2.2 million tons of carbon dioxide, 225 tons of carbon monoxide and 120 tons of sulfur dioxide annually. A company spokeswoman deferred comments on the judge's ruling to IDEM. Stephanie McFarland added that Riverview is on pace to close its financing for the project later this year and anticipates starting construction in early 2021. IDEM has said hazardous air pollutants that would be released by the plant would not have a substantial impact on air quality. However, opponents have raised concerns about the facility's air contamination from the beginning and are appealing issues related to how IDEM modeled those impacts for its permit. Southwestern Indiana Citizens for Quality of Life and Valley Watch requested the records nearly a year earlier in June 2018 to prepare public comments on the proposed permit. The organizations argued that the requested information would have significantly changed their comments. But IDEM did not provide the records until a week before the agency issued its final air pollution permit, according to a ruling from Indiana's environmental adjudication office.

17 charged in drug case against bikers

EVANSVILLE — Federal prosecutors have indicted 17 people with ties to a motorcycle club on charges they operated a drug ring in Indiana and Kentucky. The indictments announced Thursday by U.S. Attorney Josh Minkler allege that some of defendants are members of the Grim Reapers Motorcycle Club or associates of that Evansville group. Prosecutors said they believe Evansville residents Gary Wayne Forston, 39, and Jason Wilson, 42, were the ringleaders of a drug operation that distributed methamphetamine in Evansville and nearby communities. Forston is the Grim Reapers' president and was previously indicted on weapons charges after a November raid on the club. Minkler said officials had seized 23 guns, $35,000 in cash and 10 pounds of meth that has an estimated street value of more than $250,000. Most of the defendants were believed to be mid-level distributors who are accused of selling drugs to lower-level drug dealers or directly to users, the Evansville Courier & Press reported. The indictments are the culmination of a six-month, multi-agency investigation that included federal, state and local law enforcement. Minkler said his office will consider pursuing forfeiture of the Grim Reapers' headquarters. "What we don't want is the Grim Reapers to come back and relocate in that clubhouse and start doing business again," he said.

$1M in drugs bound for South Bend seized

SOUTH BEND — Two men face federal drug trafficking charges after a drug bust on an Oklahoma interstate uncovered more than 125 pounds of methamphetamine worth more than $1 million that was headed to South Bend. Charges of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute a controlled substance were filed in the U.S. District Court of Northern Indiana on Wednesday against John Bradshaw, 63, of Buchanan and Bradley Burns, 31, of South Bend. Burns is also charged with possession of a firearm by a felon. The charges were the result of an investigation involving two federal agencies, the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics and the South Bend Police Department. The investigation started when the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics stopped a car Monday eastbound on Interstate 40 for the improper use of a turn signal. When officers searched the vehicle, they found 128 pounds of crystal meth in the trunk, according to Mark Woodward, a spokesman for the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics. The estimated value of the drugs is $1.2 million. There was also about 1 kilogram of heroin in the trunk of the car, according to court documents. The driver of the vehicle, Bradshaw, told officers that he had picked up the drugs in San Diego and was being paid to deliver them to a house in the 700 block of South Kentucky Street in South Bend at the direction of Burns. Officers replaced the drugs with "a sham substance" and arranged for Bradshaw to deliver to Burns on Tuesday, according to court documents. When Bradshaw arrived at the South Kentucky Street residence, Burns' ssignaled for waiting officers to "initiate a take down."

STATE BRIEFS

Off-duty police officer charged in drunk driving

PLAINFIELD — An off-duty police officer responding to an emergency call has been charged with driving drunk, authorities said. Patrick Tucker, 33, was among several officers responding to a situation Friday, according to the Plainfield Police Department. A fellow officer noticed "signs of possible alcohol impairment." Tucker was removed from the scene, arrested on charges of operating a vehicle while intoxicated and booked into county jail Friday evening. He was released early Saturday. Command staff asked Indiana State Police to investigate. Tucker has been placed on paid administrative leave pending a recommendation for termination to the Plainfield Police Commissioner Board. "The actions of this officer are unacceptable," Police Chief Jared McKee said in a statement. "The Plainfield Police Department refuses to compromise the quality of service we provide to the community and will continue to hold our officers accountable and to a higher standard." The Hendricks County Prosecutor's Office will determine formal charges. Tucker started with the police department in 2017.

Memorial food drive in slain teens' memory

DELPHI — Families of two teenage girls slain in northern Indiana in 2017 are having a food drive and a pet supply donation drive to mark the three-year anniversary of their unsolved slayings. The donation drive will be Thursday evening at Delphi United Methodist Church, according to the (Lafayette) Journal & Courier. Abigail Williams, 13, and Liberty German, 14, were killed in February 2017 after they went hiking near their northern Indiana hometown of Delphi. The case remains unsolved, but authorities say they continue to receive tips. "The anniversaries are difficult," said Anna Williams, who lost her daughter. Authorities have released sketches of the suspected killer, including one in April based on a cellphone video that's believed to be more accurate than a sketch released in July 2017.

Woman accused of biting trooper

VIGO COUNTY — A 38-year-old woman is accused of biting a state trooper after a traffic stop, which also resulted in a separate drunken driving arrest, authorities said. Daphney Allen, 38, was a front-seat passenger in an SUV stopped Friday evening for running a stop sign in Vigo County. The driver, William A. Roberts, 51, appeared to be under the influence of alcohol. There were three children younger than 10 in the vehicle, authorities said. Allen refused to identify herself to police and locked the door, a police report said. Later, she was handcuffed and escorted to a trooper's car where she broke equipment and bit the trooper's arm when he tried to put a safety belt on her. Allen faces battery on law enforcement, resisting law enforcement and neglect of dependents, among other charges. Roberts was charged with operating a vehicle while intoxicated with a passenger younger than 18 years of age, neglect of a dependent and other charges. Both are being held without bond and expected in court Monday. Authorities said Roberts was also wanted on a Vigo County warrant for domestic battery. The children were released to Allen's grandmother.

Traveling Smithsonian exhibit on display

BRISTOL — A traveling Smithsonian Institution exhibit on life in rural America will be on display at northern Indiana's Elkhart County Historical Museum until mid-March. The exhibit, "Crossroads: Change Comes to Rural America," includes photos depicting farms, forests, small towns and rivers from Alaska to New Hampshire. Visitors can also hear residents talk on video about their experiences. Museum officials have added local touches for display alongside the exhibit, including information about a family that settled in Elkhart County in 1858 and changes in agriculture, according to the South Bend Tribune. The display runs until March 15. Admission is free. Museum director Julie Parke said museum officials are excited to "spark conversations we think are important to have about the intersection of urban and rural, the tensions between agricultural and manufacturing." Communities in several states including Michigan and Idaho are also hosting the exhibit.

Woman pleads guilty to fatally shooting man

GOSHEN — A woman has pleaded guilty in the fatal 2018 shooting of a man whose body was dumped in a wooded area. Cindy Goodwin, 52, pleaded guilty Thursday in Elkhart County Circuit Court to one count of murder in the slaying of Johnny Mullins, 50. The Elkhart woman admitted during Thursday's hearing that she killed Mullins on April 1, 2018. His body was found the next day with a gunshot wound in a wooded area near the apartment complex where Goodwin lived. "I shot him," Goodwin told Judge Michael Christofeno, when he asked her exactly what she did. Goodwin acknowledged that she was given the gun by a friend and that the same man had helped her move Mullins' body from her apartment to the woods north of the apartment complex. Goodwin had taken part in court-ordered mental evaluations after her attorneys said that she had little memory of the events surrounding the murder, but was found competent to stand trial in September. Goodwin was scheduled to be sentenced March 26. Her plea agreement calls a sentence of 45 years in prison and 10 years of probation.

Sen. Gerald Neal, a member of the Black Legislative Caucus, said the event will pay tribute to national heroes. "African Americans have played pivotal roles in our nation's military history all the way back to the American Revolution," Neal said. "We want to salute their service and share stories of their service and sacrifice." The event begins at 11:30 a.m. and is open to the public.

Adult, child found dead in apartment blaze

LOUISVILLE — An adult and a child have died in an apartment fire that also injured a firefighter, authorities said. The blaze was reported early Sunday morning at a three-story apartment building in Louisville, fire officials told news outlets. The bodies were found in an apartment on the first floor, Louisville Fire Lt. Col. Jim Frederick said. A firefighter was taken to the hospital for a minor ankle injury, he said. There were smoke detectors in the complex, but it's unclear if they were working, Maj. Bobby Cooper said. Investigators will try to determine the cause of the blaze.

Bodies of 2 women, 5 animals found at home

HENDERSON — Two women and five animals have been found dead at a home, authorities said. Jennifer Glunt, 61, and Robin Glunt, 55, of Henderson were found shot on Friday, and a weapon was located at the scene, Henderson County Coroner Bruce Farmer told news outlets. Farmer said autopsies were planned Monday. The bodies of four dogs and a cat also were found inside the home. Farmer said it wasn't immediately clear how they died.

Woman, great-grandson die in house fire

HOPKINSVILLE — A woman and her great-grandson died in a weekend house fire, officials said. Crews responded late Saturday to reports of heavy fire and smoke at a home in Hopkinsville, fire Capt. Michael Pendleton told the Kentucky New Era. The victims were identified as Alvin Davidson, 10, and Martha Anne Harris, 87, Christian County Coroner Scott Daniel said. He said it appears both died of smoke inhalation. "They were both in the back bedroom," he said. "The fire appears to have started in the front of house living room."

Indiana group identifies key goals to fight homelessness

By APRILE RICKERT
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

NEW ALBANY — Members of a newly formed group to address homelessness and affordable housing in Southern Indiana are narrowing down their priorities.

Haven House Services Inc. held the second meeting for the group Wednesday at Prosser in New Albany; the first meeting was in Jeffersonville and subsequent ones are planned for Charlestown, Scottsburg and Madison.

More than 100 people attended the first meeting in January, which was part panel discussion and part group work on addressing issues, barriers and solutions. At Wednesday's meeting, attendees broke into groups to identify the top five priorities they want to come out of this initiative.

Topping the list is community engagement — educating the public, reducing "not in my back yard" attitudes when it comes to adding affordable housing or permanent supportive housing, and changing community and political will.

Barb Anderson, executive director at Haven House Services Inc., said this is a hurdle that needs to be overcome first to allow other work to be done.

"If Number One is not met, nothing is going to happen," she said. "We have to change the community's idea of what affordable housing looks like, and who it's for, and what it's about.

"Because if we don't, we're not going to have it."

Second on the list is creating more transitional and temporary housing, followed by education — both to teach the public and help those who are experiencing homelessness and gain skills to help them break the cycle. Anderson said the fourth objective is to deal more realistically with poverty — identifying demographics and developing "more humane solutions.

The fifth objective is to come up with a three-year plan to address the issues.

"That was a good, meaty five," Anderson said. "It's a pretty workable list, but you grow in baby steps."

Before breaking into groups, Anderson led a discussion among the several dozen people in attendance on issues ranging from availability of affordable housing in Southern Indiana to who can actually afford it and funding. They also broke down demographics of those experiencing homelessness here and how it's shifted over time.

She told the story of a woman who had to pay almost $3,000 at once to get settled into an apartment that rents for $850 a month, with payment of first and last month's rent and deposit required. She said that while about 70 percent of the people who come through the Jeffersonville shelter Catalyst Rescue Mission, formerly Haven House, have some type of income, much of it is well below the line for affording even "affordable housing."

"These people are expected to be independent in our community and it's impossible," Anderson said, adding that "Everybody's very enthusiastic and they enjoyed the discussion. I think it's long overdue."

Carol Marsh, case manager for Salvation Army of Madison, was among those representing multiple counties in Southern Indiana. She said that while there are some people with mental illness experiencing homelessness, "Our homeless population is primarily caused by addiction," she said. "We are a little river town that has the same issues that cities do."

She said she was glad to be able to collaborate with people from around the region on an issue that affects so many in systemic ways.

"I think the best thing about this forum for me has been that there's been so many people with such different ideas and we can all come together and mix our ideas," Marsh said. "It gives you I think such a broader view of the problems that we have, the reasons that we have these problems and how to better get a solution."

AT A GLANCE

The next meeting will be March 5 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Charlestown Arts & Enrichment Center, 999 Water St. in Charlestown.

April's meeting will be at the Lifelong Learning Center in Scottsburg, and May's meeting will be held in Madison, location to be announced.

Why Farm Bureau health plans push is raising concerns

By SAMANTHA HORTON
Side Effects Public Media

NORTHERN INDIANA — The sun is setting as Jacob Smoker does evening chores — feeding cattle on his family's farm in northern Indiana.

"We raise beef cattle primarily," says Smoker, who chairs the Indiana Farm Bureau's Young Ag and Professionals state group. "That goes to grocery stores, things like that. Also, we do row crops, as well. Non-GMO corn, non-GMO soybeans, things for, like, tofu processing, as well as seed corn and wheat."

Northern Indiana farmer Jacob Smoker is a younger farmer hoping the proposed Indiana Farm Bureau group health plan will offer him and his family a more affordable health care option. (Photo by Samantha Horton/Indiana public Broadcasting)

After working in Chicago, Smoker came back to the farm a few years ago. He says one of the biggest challenges has been health care costs.

"Each person in the operation kind of has their own way that they're doing health care," he says. "I've got a brother that's running without any right now. I've got some. My other brother runs with Department of Defense. He's a reservist in the Army."

Smoker's wife is working, in part, to get health insurance for their family.

"(My) wife teaches and, right now, that's a really, really good benefit for our family," Smoker says. "She doesn't do it for the money. It's mostly the insurance side of it."

He and his wife have a daughter and another child on the way. After a complication in their daughter's birth, Smoker says she needs ongoing medical care.

To get the most out of their health coverage, he and his wife have had to strategize about when to see a medical professional.

"We visit a speech pathologist and things like that, but the costs that are associated with that and the cost of not only the delivery, the associated hospital costs, but then the ongoing care, it is substantial," Smoker says.

"We meet her deductible quite frequently, so it's something that's on our minds quite a bit. On a farm salary and on a teacher's salary, it stretches things pretty tight some years."

Lots of Hoosier farmers face a similar problem with health care costs, according to an Indiana Farm Bureau survey. At the group's annual convention in December, President Randy Kron told members that health care would be a top priority for 2020.

"We had about 2,000 of you answer the survey," he said. "Two big things came out of it. One, it was very, very clear, the overwhelming majority said the health care cost was adversely affecting your farm…

The other thing that we got out of the survey was that we have to get down to the individual policy. Seventy-three percent told us they have no employees, so you got to be able to get down to an individual policy."

Indiana Farm Bureau Director of Public Policy Katrina Hall says other organizations in the state offer a group health plan.

"There are many associations who offer an association health plan," she says. "The Indiana Chamber of Commerce kicked off one recently. But what we discovered was that those health plans that are already and enabled in statute are — they're really intended and drafted for two employees or more."

Indiana law doesn't allow the Farm Bureau's proposed group health plan to cover sole proprietors, so the bureau is looking to create that option, as Tennessee and several other Midwestern states have done.

Hall expects there might be some pushback, but she believes this is the best option to pursue. She says it will offer an alternative to the Affordable Care Act marketplace.

"There may be some health insurance providers who feel like this is competition for them," she says of the proposed legislation, Senate Bill 184. "I would point out, though, that aside from what's offered on the ACA exchange, the primary provider in Indiana does not offer individual policies."

These sorts of association health plans are raising concerns. Kevin Lucia, of Georgetown University's Health Policy Institute, says they can carry a risk.

Healthy people might gravitate to these plans, leaving traditional plans to cover the most expensive care, he says.

"The people on the traditional markets ultimately could face higher premiums over the long term, and that's an important risk to consider," he says.

Lucia notes plans like the one the Indiana Farm Bureau wants to offer do not have to abide by the Affordable Care Act regulations. That may mean people with pre-existing conditions don't get covered and there's isn't robust mental health or maternity coverage.

"Those are the kinds of things that I think state policymakers have to take into consideration before they open the door for a type of health insurance arrangement that doesn't have to come into compliance with all the kind of consumer protections that their individual and small group market carriers have to come into compliance with," he says.

Kron says the Farm Bureau plan will require a health evaluation and that might cause some to be denied.

He says members will be encouraged to join the plan as soon as possible.

"Once you're on the plan, you won't be canceled for health issues or anything," he says.

Smoker says he realizes not every member of his family might be accepted into the group plan.

"Every family's got (someone), you know, my mom's got a heart condition that would probably exclude her from that," he says.

Still, he feels it is the best option, especially when it comes to younger generations taking over the family farm.

"Folks like myself, young families, people that are coming back to the farms, it's hard enough to come back to an ag operation as it is," he says. "If you can alleviate some of that burden through lessening the health care costs on an operator that would be a huge benefit."

If legislation is approved, the Indiana Farm Bureau leadership wants to start offering health plans for next year.

Shift from accountability era

Lawmakers may decouple teacher evaluations from test scores

By EMMA KAY FITTES
Chalkbeat Indiana
chalkbeat.org

Indiana lawmakers may soon stop requiring students' test scores in teacher evaluations, a move that would mark a significant shift away from the state's tough accountability era.

A bill that would remove the requirement garnered support from Republican leaders, unanimously passing through the Indiana House last month.

It's a surprising pivot for the state's Republican Party, which once was aggressively reform-minded.

Back in 2011, lawmakers mandated that test scores account for a "significant" portion of teacher evaluations, amid other sweeping education policy changes.

But nearly a decade later, enthusiasm for those policies is waning, after a yearslong teacher shortage and ongoing concerns about whether low state test results are an accurate reflection of students' knowledge.

Growing unrest among Indiana teachers culminated in thousands joining the national Red For Ed movement — rallying at the statehouse in November to demand greater support for public schools.

"It appears to me that the pressure that has been placed on legislators up until now, and the pressure that came about for Red For Ed… has helped legislators see things from a different perspective," said Andy Downs, a political scientist from Purdue University Fort Wayne.

Lawmakers have already moved to protect teachers and schools from test scores in the short-term — passing a two-year, hold-harmless exemption on Monday.

The move came after just one-third of Indiana's students passed both the math and English portions of the state's new ILEARN exam in 2019. The exemption renders schools' A-F grades essentially meaningless.

Coupled with the State Board of Education's January vote to return four state takeover schools to their original districts, these changes mark a quiet move away from the ideas that swept the state — and nation — a decade ago.

"Accountability is … an easy place to address a significant concern of teachers without having to do much fiscally," Downs said.

Some accountability advocates have cautioned state leaders against abandoning standardized test scores. The National Council on Teacher Quality opposed both the hold harmless and the potential change affecting evaluations.

The group has said there's no evidence that ILEARN results fail to accurately reflect what students know.

Scores increase the validity of teacher evaluations, the council's president, Kate Walsh, said in an email statement.

"These measures provide educational leaders and teachers, themselves, with critical information about how and where improvements in teacher practice are necessary to ensure that all students have equitable access to excellent teachers," the statement said.

Educators, however, argue that test scores aren't a fair metric by which to judge teacher effectiveness, in part because outside factors, such as poverty and race, have been shown to correlate with student scores.

"I think we get hung up on data," said Tim McRoberts, associate director of the Indiana Association of School Principals. "We start to worry too much on results and we don't focus enough on process. The most important thing that goes on in a school everyday is what happens in the classroom."

Indiana first tied evaluations to test scores during the height of the idea's popularity, nationally, when schools could receive federal dollars for enacting policies favored by the Obama administration, including linking test scores and evaluations.

Using the objective measure was meant to more accurately distinguish between effective and ineffective teachers.

But a 2017 study found that the majority of teachers nationwide are still rated effective or better. The number of states requiring that test scores be factored into evaluations has slowly fallen, reaching 34 last year after peaking at 43 in 2015.

In Indiana, districts were left to decide how to implement the vague requirement, so how teachers are evaluated currently depends on where they work. Most districts have made test scores account for around 10% of evaluations, McRoberts said. Teachers whose grade or subject isn't directly tied to the state test are often evaluated based on their schools' scores.

The teacher evaluation bill, filed by Cook next goes to the Senate.

How many hours should online students spend learning?

How much time should online students spend learning?

After the state lost $47 million from two now-defunct virtual charter schools enrolling thousands of inactive students, Indiana lawmakers want to make sure online students are showing up.

A new proposal that sailed through the House last week would seek to define online attendance and add steep consequences for students and schools when those enrolled don't spend enough time on schoolwork or take standardized tests.

"This kind of teaching can be very beneficial, but it's not beneficial if the machine is never turned on and the student never participates," said Rep. Ed DeLaney, D-Indianapolis.

State lawmakers have been walking a tightrope on virtual charter schools: In recent years, they have taken small steps to crack down on the publicly funded sector's low academic results, while not wanting to impose too many regulations on what they see as an important school choice option for students struggling in brick-and-mortar settings.

But at the state's remaining virtual charter schools, officials protested online education being painted with a broad brush because of the problems at Indiana Virtual School and Indiana Virtual Pathways Academy, which they say were isolated incidents of wrongdoing.

"It's not what's happening across the board. It's just not," said Chandre Sanchez, executive director of two virtual charter schools, Indiana Connections Academy and Indiana Connections Career Academy. "It feels like an over-reaction."

State and local oversight officials found last year that Indiana Virtual School and Indiana Virtual Pathways Academy took in about $47 million combined in state funding for thousands of students who weren't actively attending the online schools. While claiming perfect attendance rates, the two schools over-reported enrollment by keeping on their rolls students who hadn't logged in for months, students who had moved out of state, and even at least one student who had died.

School officials denied inflating enrollment, but the two troubled virtual charter schools closed in August under the weight of the scandal. The state recovered about $7 million before the closures.

Under last week's proposal, if a virtual charter school student doesn't participate enough or doesn't take the state's mandatory tests, that student will be barred from continuing to attend virtual charter schools and the school will lose funding for that student.

The two Connections schools, along with the virtual charter network that includes Hoosier Academy of Indianapolis and Insight School of Indiana, have slightly lower attendance rates than most brick-and-mortar schools — between 86% and 90%.

They follow the same state attendance requirements as other schools, officials say: 180 days of instruction, with five hours per day for elementary students and six hours per day for middle-and high-school students.

Test participation rates at those four virtual charter schools hover just under or at the state average. Getting students to show up for standardized tests is one of the toughest challenges virtual charter schools face, since they have to arrange test-taking sites across the state and sometimes provide transportation for students.

For 2017-18, the most recent state A-F grades available, Hoosier Academy and Insight received Cs. Connections had a D, and Connections Career Academy was not rated because that was its first year open. Another school in the Hoosier Academies network, Hoosier Academy Virtual Charter School, closed in 2018 after eight straight years of F grades.

DeLaney said his proposal offers "a way to honestly monitor the virtuals. [Officials] don't have to insult them, but they can put them under a limitation that's effective."

Despite last year's fraud allegations at Indiana Virtual School and Indiana Virtual Pathways Academy, state lawmakers were poised to skip addressing virtual schools this session until DeLaney tacked these last-minute provisions onto another education bill about enrollment.

House education leader Bob Behning, R-Indianapolis, had said he wanted to see the results of pending state and federal investigations into the two troubled virtual charter schools before considering new legislation.

The late addition of virtual school matters means there wasn't a chance for much public debate, but it could get more discussion as the bill moves to the Senate for consideration.

Still, the Democratic-led proposal received an unusual show of bipartisan support in the Republican-controlled House.

Silver Creek rallies in 2nd half to oust Cubs

CHARLESTOWN — Madison had everything going its way. Two minutes into the second half, the Cubs were riding a wave of momentum and led No. 5 Silver Creek by 10 in the semifinals of the Class 3A Sectional at Charlestown on Friday.

But the momentum shift was swift and stunning. The Dragons closed the third quarter on a 14-3 run to seize the lead and then pulled away in the fourth quarter to end Madison's season, 62-46.

The Cubs shot 56 percent from the floor in the second half and outrebounded Silver Creek 26-21 for the game, but Madison simply couldn't hold the Dragons back forever.

"That's just such a good team. We knew what type of defense they were going to have, we prepared for it all week, practiced against the boys, and we held off that tide for as long as we possibly could," Madison coach Sonja Bowyer said. "We just ran out of magic at the end."

Madison played arguably its worst game of the season in a 77-50 loss at Silver Creek last month and the Cubs were determined not to make the same mistake in the tournament.

After a ragged start, Madison's defense clamped down and the offense

Raiders stun Pacers 36-29 in semifinals

By ROB LAFARY

Switzerland County thought it had put an end to its 2020 woes by ending the regular season on a three-game win streak and reclaiming its spot as the favorite in this week's Class 2A Sectional 45 Girls Basketball Tournament. With a bye into the semifinals and playing a South Ripley team it had already beaten twice, a championship game appearance seemed inevitable.

But the old cliché of beating a team three teams being a difficult task rang true on Friday night and Switzerland County's woes returned with a vengeance. In the end, South Ripley pulled off a semifinal shocker, defeating the Pacers 36-29 in Vevay.

Nothing hit harder for Switzerland County than its struggles on the offensive end. In fact, both teams struggled offensively early and scoring droughts paired with turnovers highlighted the first half.

South Ripley led 6-4 at the end of the first quarter when the period ended with neither team scoring over the final 3:21. Switzerland County got a bucket from Kyah Chase to tie the game 4-4 with 4:11 left in the first but the Pacers went cold for the next 5:37 until snapping that skid on a Josie Meyer 3-pointer that gave the Swiss its first lead of the game with 6:34 left in the second quarter.

The Raiders responded with a 3-0 run, grabbing the lead 10-9 after a free throw by L.J. McQueen and bucket by Gracie Gunter to snap a Ripley scoring drought that lasted longer than that of Switzerland County.

South Ripley (10-14) used a bucket by Cierra Copeland to grab the 6-4 lead at the end of the first period but that bucket came at the 3:21 mark. For the next 7:06, Ripley failed to score before regaining its one-point lead.

Despite that and 15 turnovers in the half, the Raiders finished the second quarter winning a back-and-forth scoring battle and taking advantage of Switzerland County turnovers — nine in the first half — ending on two free throws by Lindsey Meyer for a 15-14 halftime advantage.

Switzerland County woke up long enough to get back out in front 18-16 on a 3-pointer by Maddie Duvall and free throw from Aleiah Thomas but with 6:38 left in the third, the Pacers again went cold and for the first time all night, South Ripley warmed up enough to pull away.

While the Pacers dealt with their second scoring drought — the Swiss were scoreless for 4:27 — South Ripley went on a 7-0 run in that span and then finished the quarter on a 5-0 run to lead 28-20. The lead ballooned to 12 points as Ripley opened the fourth period with back-to-back baskets by McQueen and Rachel Meyer.

Meyer and Chase responded with back-to-back 3-pointers to briefly give Switzerland County some momentum toward a comeback to cut the deficit in half at 32-26 with 2:48 remaining. South Ripley however responded with a bucket by McQueen underneath and Meyer's late basket to put the Pacers down 34-29 with just 20 seconds left and Switz was forced to foul again.

Copeland put the game on ice for Ripley, hitting two free throws with 18 seconds left to give the Raiders the seven-point win.

Switzerland County finished the night with no players in double figures and the Pacers committed 17 turnovers. Meyer led the team in scoring with nine points and Chase followed with eight points.

Toppers put up fight in loss to Senators

By JORDAN BEAR
Special to the Courier
sports@madisoncourier.com

Shawe's season may have come to a close on Friday night with a 56-21 loss to West Washington in the Class A Sectional but by no means did the Hilltoppers make it easy for the host Senators.

Shawe trailed by 10 at the end of the first quarter and a dozen at the halftime break but the Hilltoppers' pesky defense caused issues to a very potent West Washington offense. Where Shawe struggled was on the offensive end, making only three field goals in the second half and zero in the fourth quarter when the Senators finally put Shawe away for the win.

Although the Hilltoppers' season came to a close, Shawe coach Terry King was pleased with the way his team fought for the entire 32 minutes.

"I'm really proud of the way the girls played. They had to earn that victory against us, we didn't just give up," King said. "They weren't able to sub until late in the game because they I don't think were comfortable with their lead yet. Our girls fought for 32 minutes and I couldn't be prouder."

Shawe was led in scoring by its lone senior, Grace McAllister, who had 11 points in her final game in a Hilltopper uniform. McAllister said she's grateful for everything that Shawe has given her and for her teammates.

"Shawe has meant everything to me, and it's given me so much. These girls have worked so hard and we've come so far," McAllister said. "These girls will always be my family and I will never forget them or my time here."

"The word you can use for her is consistent. Some games she's gonna be hitting her shots, and some game she's not always going to, but you can always count on 8-12 points and 8-12 rebounds each night," King said. "She's got a great attitude, she's a great kid, and we're definitely going to miss her next year."

Freshman Calli Alderman added six points for Shawe while junior Abigail Hill had two points, junior Phoebe Grote had one point and freshman Autumn Lathrem had one point.

West Washington was led by Rian Russell who had 24 points and scored her 1,000th-career point on a 3-pointer in the third quarter.

The Senators went on to lost 47-38 to No. 3 Trinity Lutheran in the sectional championship on Saturday. The Cougars had defeated Crothersville 62-36 in Friday's other semifinal.

Shawe ends its season with an 8-15 record.

Slow start dooms Madison 69-46 to Batesville as losing streak reaches 6

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison's losing streak reached six games 69-46 to Batesville on Saturday afternoon at Salm Gym.

The Cubs struggled from the outset, trailing by 14 (19-5) seven minutes into the game. Madison rallied briefly to cut the lead to four on a Mason Welsh 3-pointer with 4:47 left in the second period, but another big rally by Batesville pushed the margin back to 14 (37-23) by halftime.

Madison again cut the lead to single digits at 39-32 with 3:56 left in the third, but trailed by 18 (52-34) at the end of the period and by as many as 25 in the fourth.

After shooting an abysmal 29.6% (8-for-27) in the first half, Madison recovered to hit 11-of-19 (57.9%) in the second half and finished the game a respectable 41.3%. But Batesville started hot and got hotter as the game wore on, finishing the game 25-for-46 (54.3%) overall.

Luke Miller scored 14 points and pulled down seven rebounds to lead Madison while Welsh had 13 and Jackson Falconberry scored 10.

Colt Meyer had 19 points, Charlie Dice had 17, R.J. Powell scored 13 and Sam Voegele 12 for Batesville.

Madison, now 10-8 after starting the season 10-2, will try to break the skid at home on Thursday against Lawrenceburg. Madison then travels to Class 3A No. 5 Greensburg Friday in a game that has been moved up a day due to Greensburg's girls basketball team playing in the regional.

went to work. The Cubs trailed 11-9 after the first quarter but locked down the Dragons in the second, taking a nine-point lead late in the quarter while getting Creek into serious foul trouble.

Madison led just 26-21 at halftime but quickly pushed the lead to 10 early in the third quarter on baskets by Jade Nutley, Lundun Perry and Jessie Dyer and a 3-pointer by Perry. With 5:50 to go in the quarter, the Cubs were in the driver's seat.

Madison's lead was still at nine (37-28) after a Nutley layup with 3:54 left in the third when Silver Creek started taking control. A 3-pointer by Jaclyn Emly kick-started the Dragon comeback, and Alana Striverson followed with four free throws and a layup to tie the game 37-37 with 1:53 to go. An Emly basket right before the buzzer put Silver Creek on top.

Madison managed just eight points in the fourth quarter but the Cubs still had a chance to pull off the upset. Silver Creek went ahead by eight (46-38) early in the fourth, but a Nutley basket with 2:41 to play pulled the Cubs back to within four. A Creek miss on a free throw led to a Nutley rebound and Madison had a chance to pull within one possession, but the Cubs turned the ball over. Another turnover on Madison's next possession led to two more Dragon points.

Silver Creek then scored 12 points over the final minute and a half to blow open the game.

"I feel like Silver Creek's defense was finally pushing us up to the halfcourt line and instead of looking toward the basket, we just kept looking back and forth and really never got that momentum shifited back our way," Bowyer said. "Once that happened, it was hard to overcome."

Nutley finished the game with 17 points on 7-of-9 shooting with 11 rebounds and three blocks. Senior Harper Watson, who came off the bench to spur Madison's big second quarter, scored four points and Taylor Lynch had seven points and four rebounds.

Junior Alana Striverson, who went over 1,000 career points last week, led Silver Creek with 26 points while Emly hit 4-of-6 on 3-pointers and scored 18 points. As a team, the Dragons shot 57% (12-for-21) from the floor in the second half and 46% (19-for-41) for the game.

Silver Creek improved to 21-3 on the season but lost to No. 1 Salem (22-3) 54-52 in the sectional championship game on Saturday night. The Lions had held off a late charge from host Charlestown to win 42-34 in the semifinals.

Madison ends the season with a 14-9 record and says goodbye to seniors Jessie Dyer, Morgan Cahall, Meghan Eades, Watson and Paige Young who helped lead the Cubs to their most wins and first winning campaign in a season since the 2014-15. Madison does return three of its five starters and has a talented young group ready to come in.

"Talking with (the seniors), it stinks to lose sectionals but I tried to remind them what they accomplished this year," Bowyer said. "This is the best record we've had in a couple of years and the first winning season in a couple of years. I know it's hard to end on a note like that, but we need to make sure that we're celebrating the season we had."

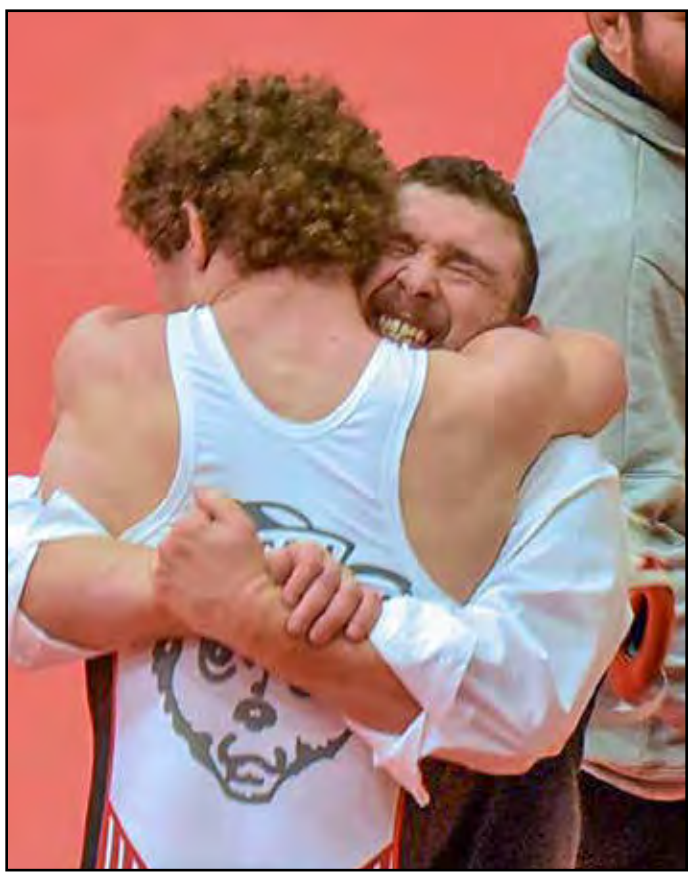
WRESTLING REGIONAL

Madison's Skinner wins title, seven other locals earn semistate berths

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com



Madison's Van Skinner found himself on the wrong end of an upset in the sectional two weeks ago but the freshman star rebounded a week later to win a regional.

Skinner knocked off sectional champion Nick Holt of Columbus North in the regional semifinals then cruised to an easy win to claim the championship at 170 pounds Saturday at Jeffersonville.

It was a remarkable turnaround story for a freshman who has been dominate all season.

Skinner was one of six Madison wrestlers to finish in the top four and earn a berth to semistate, tying a school record.

Switzerland County's Austin Wolf and Jacob Wolf each placed fourth while Southwestern's Brady McLain was also fourth as all three advanced to the next level.

Van Skinner, who finished third at sectional after being seeded first, opened his regional tournament with an 8-1 decision over Jeffersonville's Jadehn Debman. He then pinned sectional champion Holt in 3:28 to advance to the finals.

In the championship round, Skinner dominated Charlestown's Deke Brown with a pin in 1:00 to win his first regional crown and improve to 46-4 on the season.

"Van really turned it on today and was on a mission," said Madison coach — and Van's father — Tyson Skinner. "I'm so proud of him and for a freshman in the upper weights to have this type of success is outstanding. Now we wait to see who he draws for semistate."

Two other Cubs reached the finals. Noah Burkhardt (42-8) pinned Corydon's Hunter Pitts in 1:36 in the opening round of the 120-pount weight class then pinned Tell City's Kelby Glenn in 46 seconds in the semifinals. He then fell via pin in 4:21 to Charlestown's Colin Knox in the championship.

Jacob McRoberts (43-8) pinned Charlestown's Alex Sheehan in 4:58 in the opener at 126 pounds then posted an 8-0 major decision over Austin Wolf in the semifinals. In the championship he suffered a 22-7 technical fall in 5:48 to Jeffersonville's Adonis Boyd.

"I have to constantly remind myself that Noah has only been wrestling for three years. He ran into a very tough Charlestown kid in the finals," Tyson Skinner said. "Jacob has really become a great leader. He put together a pretty good tourney today and we will be ready to get back to the grind for semistate."

Junior Dalton Berry (38-12) opened the 152-pound weight class with a win via pin in 3:29 over Jeffersonville's Greg Shingleton before falling in 2:32 to sectional champion Noah White of Columbus East in the semifinals. He rebounded to beat Jennings County's Cameron Woodard 8-6 to claim third place.

"Dalton killed it today. He opened the day with a win over someone he has never beat, then ended the day with another win over another kid he has never beat," Skinner said. "He is believing in himself and what he is capable of."

Mason Long (38-12) opened the 152-pound class with a win by pin in 3:01 over Jeffersonville's Ethan Fox before falling in 3:52 to Tell City's Corey Braunecker in the semifinals. Berry was then pinned in 4:10 by Charlestown's Ben Phillips to place fourth.

Tucker Adams (31-16) defeated Tell City's Will Kirtley in 36 seconds in the opener at 220 pounds but lost in injured time to Columbus East's Shawn Tyler. He was then pinned by Charlestown's Lucas Gagnon in 1:30 and placed fourth.

"Mason has grown as a person and wrestler so much in the last three years. I am so proud of him," Skinner said. "Tucker has been the heart of this team this year. He has battled through his injury and to make back-to-back trips to semistate is outstanding."

Switzerland County's Austin Wolf (28-10) picked up a 15-6 major decision over Tell City's Gage Meunier in the opener at 126 pounds before falling to McRoberts in the semifinals. He then lost 4-0 to Seymour's Sam Castetter to place fourth.

Jacob Wolf (31-13) gutted out a 7-4 win over Jeffersonville's Jeramiah Cain in the opener at 132 pounds but lost 4-2 to Mason Martin of Eastern (Pekin) in the semifinals. He then lost 5-3 to Seymour's Nate Banister to place fourth.

Southwestern's Brady McLain (33-8) picked up a quick pin in 12 seconds over Corydon's Isaac Gerdon in the opener at 195 pounds but then was pinned in 3:49 by Charlestown's Manuel Ordorica in the semifinals. He then lost in 3:34 to Brown County's Evan Bradshaw in a rematch of the sectional final to take fourth.

Seven other local wrestlers lost their first match and failed to advance: Madison's Kelsey Bilz (29-10) lost in 55 seconds to Crawford County's Donnie Feeler at 106 pounds; Madison's Bryce Turner (31-10) suffered a 13-5 major decision to Robert Cline of Jeffersonville at 113; Southwestern's Cameron Canada (27-12) lost in 3:21 to Charlestown's Colin Knox at 120; Southwestern's Clifton Hendrickson (26-11) lost in 3:31 to Eastern's Mason Martin at 132; Southwestern's Brandon Smith (22-5) lost in 3:20 to Tell City's Shane Braunecker at 145; Southwestern's Matthew Douglas (15-20) lost in 1:43 to Tell City's Alex Stahly at 182; and Switzerland County's Alex Boggs (23-16) lost in 2:44 to Jeffersonville's Cody Matherly at 195.

All nine local qualifiers will compete in the semistate at Evansville's Ford Center on Saturday. Action begins at 10 a.m. EST. The top three in each weight class advance to the IHSAA state finals.

THE FOURTH RESULTS IN UNUSUAL PLAY

Dr. Seuss claimed, "The main problem with writing in verse is, if your fourth line doesn't come out right, you've got to throw four lines away and figure out a whole new way to attack the problem. So the mortality rate is terrific."

In an uncontested bidding sequence, if the fourth bid is in the fourth suit to be named, it usually helps responder to solve his strain problem. Fourth-suit game-forcing announces that responder has an opening bid and is, usually, seeking a stopper in that fourth suit from partner.

Here South, with two solid heart stoppers, bids two no-trump, and North raises to game. After West leads the heart queen, what should declarer do?

South starts with seven top tricks: one spade, two hearts, two diamonds and two clubs. The other two tricks might come from either minor.

At first glance, it looks right to lose a diamond trick immediately. Then, when the suit divides 3-2, as it will 67.8% of the time according to the mathematicians, declarer will romp home with an overtrick. Instead, playing on clubs requires a 3-3 split, which is much less likely at 35.53%.

Here, though, the diamonds are not 3-2 and the clubs are 3-3 -- how unlucky can South be?

If dummy did not have the spade ace, ducking a diamond would be right. But with that dummy entry, declarer can test both suits. He should start by cashing the top diamonds. If they are 3-2, he continues with a third round. But when they are 4-1, South switches to clubs. Overall, he has a 79.2% chance of success.

Digestive discomfort

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I am writing in regard to "Concerned Mom," whose daughter suffers from dumping syndrome. I am a retired pediatric nurse, and many years ago I took care of a small child with dumping syndrome. The way he was fed was by continuous gavage (tube feeding). This avoided his stomach from ever being too full. I'm not sure what Concerned Mom meant by "strict diet," but perhaps her daughter should try eating small amounts every hour or two (if her lifestyle permits) to make it easier for her stomach to digest as opposed to digesting a full meal. I hope this helps. — Retired Nurse

Dear Nurse: I always love hearing from professionals. Thank you for these professional tips.

Dear Annie: Please let the mother know that her daughter should be tested for gluten intolerance. It's a simple blood test, and it could improve her life dramatically. I speak from experience. I was tested a year ago after a lifetime — 50 years of illnesses. I'm a success story. This is a new concept that most doctors are not trained in: food allergies causing inflammation and many other illnesses we've been suffering with for lifetimes. — Success Story

Dear Success Story: Congratulations on your success. Here is another letter about gluten being the culprit.

Dear Annie: I am writing regarding "Concerned Mom," whose 23-year-old daughter is suffering from gastronomic issues. Her letter describes similar symptoms that I experience when eating foods with gluten. Three times I ate foods with gluten accidentally. Within a few hours, I vomited until my stomach was empty. That's because I have been diagnosed with celiac sprue, which is an autoimmune disease.

This disease is difficult to diagnose because it mimics the symptoms of other diseases. I was given an endoscopy to find this out. Celiac sprue should not be taken lightly because it can result in a serious health condition. — Gluten-Free

Dear Gluten-Free: Other readers agree with you but have added additional foods that could be the source of the problem and certain types of digestive enzymes that provided relief. Here is a sampling:

Dear Annie: I, too, was suffering from digestive problems, and the doctors wanted to medicate instead of finding the real issues that were causing my problems.

After many months of suffering, I found a "Digestion Doctor" from an ad in the newspaper. Within two weeks of treatment with natural, plant-based digestive enzymes, I was feeling like myself again. Unbelievable! This may or may not work for her, but it is sure worth a try. — Enzymes Are Key

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book — featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette — is available as a paperback and e-book. Go to http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information.
